BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

TWO QUEENS

By KEITH GORDON

Copyright, 1904, by Keith Gordon

It was apparent that their visit to the art museum had nothing to do with art. It was equally plain that their feeling for each other could not be described as platonic. Bettina, to be sure, affected unconsciousness as she sauntered through the lofty rooms where the marble figures flashed coldly into view, exciting one to a new love of mere flesh and blood, but all the time she knew that to the man at her side she was queen of the world; also it was evident enough from the look of discontent on the man's face that her loyal subject was not altogether happy.

"Your place is right here on a pedestal along with the other statues," was what he was saying to her. "The trouble with you is, Betty, that you won't listen to your heart. I might as well plead with this marble figure!"

The queen, with well feigned reluctance, brought her glance back from the headless "Victory" that seemed forever on the point of flight to the youth at her side, who was glowering at her with an odd mixture of rebellion and adoration in his face.

"Really, Steve," she replied at last. "I'm ashamed of you. It's not my heart that's at fault; it's your purse. You know that perfectly well." And with her chin at an angle beautifully eloquent of injured innocence, she pretended to study the sculptured figures about her. In reality she watched him—felt him straining at his chains—with an exultant sense of the charm of being queen.

Her words and glance made him savage. It was hard enough to bear her delay in putting their love affair or that practical basis which points like an index finger to matrimony, but so long as it had seemed to him an honest hesitation he had borne it with what grace he could summon.

His lips set in an inflexible line, and without a word his hand closed firmly upon her arm, and with more determination than gentleness he guided her to a bench near by.

"Well?" she questioned when she had settled herself in a corner of the seat and he had squared himself beside her. In truth, though she strove valiantly to conceal it, the queen was a trifle startled.

Her late obedient subject studied her for some moments in silence and with an expression rather too suggestive of flint to be entirely to the queen's taste. Then he spoke, and his words fell as crisply as icicles.

"It is about time that you understood me," he began at last. "You have played with me long enough. What I have to say now is just this: You may take me or leave me, precisely as you choose, but whichever you do must be done at once."

He paused a moment and then elaborated:

"I'm tired of playing the devoted subject, tired of being made to feel that my love is nothing and my lack of wealth everything. I have twelve hundred a year." He paused for a brief moment, conscious of a mad desire to make the matter as bad as possible, then added, "And there is no certainty that I'll ever have more."

Though he would have thrashed cheerfully any man who had dared to make such an assertion about him, to say it to her about himself at this particular moment afforded him a grim satisfaction.

"What I want—what I will have," he continued in a muffled voice without giving her a chance to speak, "is a definite, a final answer!" And then, before the queen had really caught her breath, he finished in a tone nothing short of command, "And I want it within five minutes!"

For one fleeting moment something like pale dismay showed in the girl's face. She had never counted on a moment like this. Then her eyes kindled royally, and a flush of anger overspread her face.

Almost unconsciously she rose, her companion following her example, and her eyes blazed their resentment into the cold determination of his for a full second before she addressed him.

"You may have your answer this moment!" she flung at him in a tone of dangerous clearness. "I only wonder that I could ever have hesitated! It is 'No'—a thousand times 'No!'"

She noticed with a cruel delight the sudden, still whiteness that overspread his face as, with an ironical bow, he turned and walked rapidly away. Then a new feeling suddenly clutched at her heart.

Had she not lately been a queen, with a loyal, faithful subject to whom she had turned an ear quite royally indifferent? Had not a revolution occurred in her small domain and a republic been proclaimed? Could she not understand now the sorrows of a Marie Antoinette or a Eugenie?

And so at last the latest of dethroned queens reached her own door trying to philosophize about the matter as, doubtless, her predecessors had before her. After all, it was for the best. She was poor, and Steve was poor—in possessions. But by some freakish operation of the law of compensation both were endowed with tastes of an unmistakable richness.

"Yes, it's all for the best," she said aloud as she closed the door of her room behind her. "It's all"—

The rest was lost in the pillow, for the ex-queen had thrown herself face downward on the bed and was indulging in the plebeian comfort of a good cry.

For days thereafter such interest as she felt in the dull, gray world was centered in the postman and such messenger boys as appeared from time to time in the street in which she lived.

Not that she repented that ringing "No" that she had given Steven on the day of their quarrel—by no means. Her heart, she told herself, was dead. She could not be poor. She would not. She would marry some good old soul to whom she could render the respect of a daughter—and the bills of a wife. That was all that a girl in her position could do. It was the fault of modern ideas.

It was after she heard about his attentions to the Folsom girl that she wept no more and became markedly indifferent to the coming of the postman. From this time, too, she conscientiously tried to tolerate old Mr. Fullerton and his flowers, the two ever arriving with an alternate regularity that was full of meaning.

She pictured herself as a queen again, and this time with all the outward semblance of one. But, perversely enough, she could not keep Steven Converse out of the scene. If she saw herself rolling down Fifth avenue in the Fullerton vehicle she as instantly evoked the image of Steve doffing his hat with cold politeness, while she nodded with the haughty nonchalance of a great lady.

And so the weeks lengthened into months, and the ex-queen assured herself that she was forgetting.

* * * * * * *

"Not going out, my dear?" protested her mother as she appeared in the hall one gloomy Sunday with mackintosh and umbrella.

"Yes, mother mine. It's a fine day for the art museum. No crowd, you know!"

She had never entered the place since that fateful afternoon, but now she was all a-tremble with eagerness to get there. Some inward barrier of pride had gone down, and she knew that she wanted to visit the scene once more just because there she could feel a little nearer to him.

The turnstile admitted her, with a click, not so much, it seemed to her, into the museum as into the atmosphere of that distant afternoon. Before the "Victory" she stopped for a mournful dedicatory moment. It was here that he had accused her of being no more than a statue herself, and then—then he had gripped her arm and made her sit down and listen.

With a little gulp, she turned away and wandered blindly onward. When the mist cleared from her vision she found herself in the Egyptian room. Great carved figures glared at her with stolid faces, and a ripple of interest stirred within her. With mournful eyes she read the inscriptions beside the mummy cases.

So this brown and moldering bundle had once been a queen! Through the raised lid of the case she could just catch a glimpse of the object now so dried and terrible, but once so splendidly human.

"Poor queen!" she murmured softly, as with her chin resting on her hand she gazed down at the gorgeously ornamented mummy case. "Poor queen!" And before she realized it a tear had splashed down on the glass.

Having been a queen, something of the sadness and futility of it all wrung her spirit. Somehow being rich or poor did not now seem to matter. Being happy seemed the greatest thing.

She was too absorbed in her thoughts to notice a young man who had been making his way nearer and nearer to her in a somewhat furtive manner. Suddenly, as if he could not longer resist the temptation, a few quick steps brought him to her side.

The ex-queen looked up in surprise and then put out both hands impulsively. But the proud, high look of mastery had not yet vanished from his face.

"Did you really mean it?" he demanded.

For an answer she lifted her eyes to his for one brief, full moment. Even queens must learn their lesson. She had had hers.

Outside the steady drip, drip, drip, of the rain was only interrupted by the wailing of the wind, and the Egyptian room was very quiet and deserted.

As the newly enthroned queen turned to leave she looked down with a flushed, wistful face at the royal mummy. Then she murmured something softly.

"What's that?" asked her lover. But at her reply he looked slightly mystified.

"There's no use in telling you," she laughed. "Being only a man, you'll never understand, but I was saying good-by to the other queen."

The Mask of a Phrase.

The directness of the appeal in literary expression involves a complexity of revolt against old forms. The writer is more variously tempted than the speaker into indirections. The latter would never call the sun "the orb of day" or by the classic name of "Phoebus." Yet there was a period in English literature which lasted for a long time and is not even now wholly beyond the reach of our recollection when it seemed a breach of dignity for a writer to call anything by its right name. The concrete thing must be relieved of its vulgarity by the mask of a phrase. The horse was "the fleet courser," and all fruits were indiscriminately "Pomona's treasures." Qualities abstract enough in their common names were redeemed from the vice of particularity by personification. The processes of abstraction and generalization in the so called classic age of English literature uprooted all things and set them floating in the air; the mind was not simply a mirror reflecting things, but made composite photographs of the images themselves. Nature was seen as a bundle of these composites.—H. M. Alden in Harper's Magazine.

FAMILIAR HOSPITALITY.

The Way Villagers In the Orient Entertain Passing Strangers.

The villagers who entertain the stranger in their houses naturally enough expect him to talk to them, for thus only can he give them the return they anticipate for their hospitality. As a general rule they will accept no remuneration for the food and shelter they give, but they do expect payment for the feed of the animals.

The conversation one has to carry on with the host and the other villagers who drop in to see and pay their respects to the stranger is entertaining and even amusing as long as one is a novice in the country, because it is unsophisticated prattle, such as one must have heard in Europe in the middle ages. One unfailing topic is the rotundity of the world, the negative side of the question being always defended. They cannot believe that the sun remains stationary, for why should they disregard the evidence of their own eyes, which shows them that it does move across the vault of heaven? They ask you how much tribute your countrymen pay to their padishah (whom we wrongly call sultan), whose foot is upon the neck of all nations, as they firmly believe. They inquire minutely into your business at home and your reasons for travel in their country, etc. They handle with childlike joy and amazement your rifle and revolver, your knife, pen, pencils, your helmet and clothing, and the women can never have enough of feeling and fondling your socks, which are more evenly and closely knit than their backwoods homemade article.

One must submit to an examination of this kind wherever one stops, often several times a day. Finally it palls on the traveler unless he is gifted with the patience of Job, and from that moment he tries to avoid village hospitality. A further reason for such avoidance is the fact that the acceptance of the hospitality of villagers makes it impossible for the traveler to put into durable form his road notes of the day while matters are still fresh in his mind. For the scientific traveler or the archaeologist this is of the utmost moment. Now, among Turks writing in the house of your entertainer would simply be impolite and a boorish return for the hospitality, but Arabs regard the man who writes or draws as a spy, and will not permit it at all.—J. R. S. Sterrett in Harper's Magazine.

THE STEAMER STEWARD.

A Busy Man Who Carries a Heavy Load of Responsibility.

The comfort of the passenger depends perhaps more on the vigilance and executive ability of the chief steward than any one else. He it is who orders the supplies for the voyage, has a minute knowledge of what the storerooms and refrigerators contain and sees that the menu for each meal is ample, well cooked and daintily served. He makes arrangements in port for the entire trip, plans each day's meals at sea and with the assistance of the chief cook gets up the menu card. You will find him mornings in his office, just off the grand staircase, making up his books and records, but during the rest of the day he is all over the ship, now taking a look at the storerooms far below to see that groceries and provisions are rightly served out to the cooks, now inspecting the refrigerators to note the temperature and again watching the butchers with precise knowledge of how meats shall be cut and seeing that they are delivered to the cooks on time and in the right quantities.

All these things he is responsible for. But that is by no means all. He must also keep a minute record of all transactions of this sort and must have a watchful eye upon the passengers to note that his lieutenants among the men are giving them prompt and cheerful service. He has a record of every passenger traveling with him and all the details connected with his journey. If you sailed with him last year or twenty years ago he can refer to his books and tell you the date of the voyage, its duration, your room and seat and table and just what the stewards served to you.—Booklovers' Magazine.

Blamed It on the Mountain Air.

A new guest arrived at a New Hampshire farmhouse where a Boston gentleman happened to be holding forth on the piazza. The newcomer was much impressed by the speaker's fluency.

"I declare," he remarked to the landlord, "that man has an extensive vocabulary, hasn't he?"

The landlord was mightily pleased.

"That's so," he said. "That's what mountain air will do for a man. He ain't been boardin' with me but two weeks, and I know he must have let his waistband out much as four times."—Rochester Herald.

Bell's Confession.

In order that those of our readers who did not see the "San Francisco Call" containing the account of Bell's confession to Congressman McLachlan we copy the same, as follows:

"On last Sunday forenoon between Sacramento and Suisun, Theodore Bell, the Democratic nominee for Congress, confessed in the presence of witnesses that he was sailing under false colors. He acknowledged when called to account by Congressman James McLachlan of the Seventh District, that all the California Republican members of the House of Representatives voted against the Cuban reciprocity bill except Victor H. Metcalf, who was absent by reason of sickness. Bell also reluctantly admitted that the appropriation of $4,000 for the Napa river and $22,000 for the Sacramento river was allowed by Major Heuer, the United States engineer.

"When Bell entered the car he took a seat alongside of McLachlan and the two entered into conversation. As the talk went on McLachlan said to Bell: 'I see that for the last three weeks the newspapers in your district which are supporting you have been asserting that you were the only representative from California who voted against the Cuban reciprocity bill. Now, Bell, you know that that statement is false and that all of the Republicans from California in the lower house voted against the bill, with the possible exception of Metcalf, who, I think, was absent and not in his seat when the bill came up for passage.' Bell replied: 'Yes, that is true.' Whereupon McLachlan said: 'Bell, you know that is sailing under false colors, and why have you not corrected such statements?' Upon which Bell changed color and made no reply. Further, McLachlan said to Bell: 'You and your friends are claiming that you secured the appropriations for the Sacramento and Napa rivers. Now, you know that is incorrect. You know that neither you nor any other Congressman from California secured any appropriations for such purposes.' Bell replied that he did secure such appropriations. Whereupon McLachlan stated: 'You know that I was a member of that committee, and that the only appropriation recommended by that committee and passed by Congress was a general appropriation of $3,000,000, to be expended under direction of the Secretary of War in emergency cases. And you further knew that the appropriation of $4,000 for the Napa river and $22,000 for the Sacramento river was upon suggestion of Major Heuer, and that you had nothing to do with it.' Mr. Bell admitted such to be the truth.

"Mr. Bell's admission that he had been sailing for a congressional port under false colors but corroborates and substantiates the claim that the Republican press of the district has insisted upon all through the campaign, that Mr. Bell was claiming the entire credit for what had been accomplished by and through others and to which he was in no wise entitled. It is an easy matter to make assertions but it is a far different matter to substantiate them, as Mr. Bell will learn, if he has not already done so."

Duncan McKinlay.

"THIS man ought to go to Congress. It matters not what ticket he is on—he is OUR PEOPLE.

"Duncan McKinlay got his start as a painter. Having a head on his shoulders, and a right union head at that, he wielded the brush in the day and studied hard at night. The result was that he became a lawyer. It was not long before people found out that he was a good lawyer. Then they found out that he could talk, and that people believed what he said because he meant it.

"We union men have in Duncan McKinlay a fighting friend. Put him in Congress and he will MAKE GOOD. His character is such and his life has been such that he could not fail us if he tried. He is a union man by habit and he has no wish to break that habit. Furthermore, he is such a force in himself that he will command attention and get results.

"The editor wishes the reader to understand that Mr. McKinlay has no knowledge of this article. He does not know me, but I know him and his record.

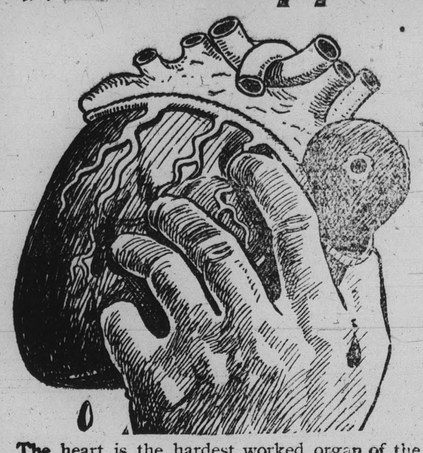
"'Write-ups' of candidates have never been and never will be inserted in the Union Labor Voice for pay. We say what we say because we believe it to be the truth and we take pains to find out before we talk.

"We wish to put all the force we have behind Duncan McKinlay."—Union Labor Voice, Oct. 22d.

JUDGE JOHN BROWN, formerly of Santa Rosa but now residing in Yountville, Napa county, is a life long Democrat but at the Republican meeting in that place last Monday he introduced Duncan E. McKinlay to the large audience present and declared that he was going to vote for him for Congress. Judge Brown told how he had been a neighbor of Mr. Kinlay in Santa Rosa for years and how he admired his ambition, talent and worth. He paid a glowing tribute to his character and dwelt upon his excellent qualifications for the office he seeks. Judge Brown, who held the office of Justice of the Peace in Santa Rosa for forty consecutive years, is a gentleman of the old school and a Democrat who realizes Duncan E. McKinlay's fitness for Congress.

MRS. DUNCAN E. MCKINLAY, in speaking of the campaign trip with her husband, says; "The most pleasing feature of the trip is the loyalty shown to my husband all through the district. The bitterness of contention and difference of opinion are trying at times but there is compensation in seeing the genuine friendship and the real affection the people have for Mr. McKinlay—well, yes, and to know that he deserves it."

What Supports The Heart?



The heart is the hardest worked organ of the human body. It beats on an average of seventy times a minute—from the minute of birth to the minute of death. Every half minute or every thirty-second beat the whole of the blood in the body is pumped through the heart, so that the dual heart moves about six tons of blood in each twenty-four hours. On the purity of that blood health depends. On the strength of the heart depends the strength of the body.

The question then is, how can we keep the blood pure and the heart strong? That question answers itself when we know what is the common cause of the blood's impurity, and whence arises the tendency to heart "trouble." What is blood? Blood is only digested food. In proportion as food is nutritious the blood is rich. In proportion as the food is properly digested the blood is pure. Indigested food clogs and corrupts the blood, and indigestion often precedes or attends the first symptoms of heart "trouble." The first necessity to the production of pure blood is that the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition shall be in the perfect working order of sound health, so that the food received into the stomach is properly digested and perfectly assimilated, for the stomach is the vital center of the body. No man is stronger than his stomach, because physical strength is derived from food digested and assimilated. Deaths ascribed to weak heart and "heart failure," therefore, are more properly ascribed to weak stomach and stomach failure.

It is this dependence of the heart upon the stomach which explains the cures of "heart trouble" effected by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It purifies the blood, eliminating from it the substances which corrupt and poison it. Even this alone would take the strain from the overtaxed heart. But Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery also acts directly upon the heart itself. It strengthens the heart's action. It contains one of the best and most efficient heart tonics known to medical practice, and as a natural consequence the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" has resulted in many notable cures of the heart when it has become involved in disease. It removes the predisposing cause of heart trouble and makes the weak heart strong.

$3,000 forfeit will be cheerfully paid, in lawful money of the United States, by the proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, if they cannot show the original statements and signatures of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing attesting the superior curative properties of their several medicines, and thus proving the genuineness and reliability of all the multitude of testimonials volunteered by grateful people.

World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

"It is with the greatest pleasure that I add my testimony to your list of sufferers who have been helped the same as I have been," writes Mrs. Wm. P. Young, of Trenton, Ontario. "Last January I took a very bad spell and was for ten days and nights suffering pains in my head, neck and jaws, and had faint spells and heart trouble. Was taking five different kinds of medicine from the doctor all at one time. Could not do my housework at all, and stomach troubled me so I could not eat anything without having an uneasy feeling. One day I thought I would give your medicine a trial. I took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and I feel better now than for years. Can do all the work for seven in family, but before using your medicines I could hardly do any work and could not be left alone, I had been such a sufferer for the last six years. I truly believe that if every poor sufferer would give Dr. Pierce's medicines a fair trial there would not be so many invalids."

"Our little boy, now three and a half years of age had been delicate since birth," writes Mrs. J. A. Shotwell, of East Stroudsburg, Pa., Box 158. "About eighteen months ago an abscess formed in the groin which we had lanced, and it continued to discharge for eight months. We were told an operation would be necessary to stop it. Acting on the advice of friends we began giving our child Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The discharge stopped before he had taken two bottles. He has taken eight bottles and his health now is good."

"For about nine years I suffered with ulcers on my ankle and one on my instep which at times would pain so severely I could not sleep night or day," writes Mrs. J. T. Sefton, of Yatesboro, Pa. "A friend advised me to try Dr. Pierce's medicines, which I did, and found great relief. Had only taken one bottle when I could do a hard day's work and could lie down and rest at night without pain. The ulcers are entirely well and I have better health than I have had for about twelve years. Took fifteen bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and can recommend your medicine to any similar sufferer. I send you sincere thanks, and blessings for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

DEATH OF MRS. ROBERT HALL YESTERDAY.

Enters Into Rest After a Long Illness—Funeral Services To-Day.

Mrs. Robt. Hall, who has been lying very ill for several months at her home on Broadway avenue, died yesterday morning.

The end was peaceful and death has released a worthy and much respected lady from her sufferings.

Everything was done to combat the disease that attacked her and doctors and nurses were constantly by her side but to no avail.

Deceased was the wife of Robt. Hall, one of the most prominent farmers of the Sonoma Valley. She was a native of New Hampshire and with her husband has resided here fer many years.

Funeral services will be held at the Hall home this afternoon at 3 o'clock and the remains will be cremated Sunday morning at Odd Fellows Cemetery, San Francisco.

Automobile Accident Near Town

While going down a grade four miles west of town, last Sunday, a heavy tonneau car with a party of automobilists, became uncontrolable and ran into Sonoma creek. The occupants escaped serious injury but it is a miracle some one of the party was not killed. The automobile belonged to the Merritts of Santa Rosa and they were accompanied by Mrs. S. D. Thompson of Florida.

Mr. Coops, who saw the accident from his home near by, came to the assistance of the automobilists and drove them to El Verano, where they took the train back to Santa Rosa.

The accident was caused by the breaking of the steering gear of the machine.

Laline Has His Preliminary Examination

John Laline, the man who shot and killed J. Guidotti in Glen Ellen last week, had his preliminary examination before Judge Gibson in Glen Ellen last Tuesday. The accused was held for trial on a charge of murder, the evidence being considered strong against him. Three witnesses were examined in addition to the doctor. Lalini is said to have started a quarrel over a dice game in a saloon prior to the shooting, and that he fired the shots that killed Guidotti and wounded Ricci when there was to all appearances no quarrel going on.

Said to Have Threatened Officer Allen

Among the effects of John Guidotti, who was shot and killed recently in Glen Ellen, was found six sticks of dynamite, a quantity of fuse and many caps. Mrs. Pancrachi of that place says that Guidotti told her he would fix Constable Allen some night and blow up the depot where the officer acted as station agent.

The records in Judge Gibson's court show that Guidotti was convicted nineteen times and acquitted seven times on various charges in the past few years.

SOFT CORE

Like the running brook, the red blood that flows through the veins has to come from somewhere.

The springs of red blood are found in the soft core of the bones called the marrow and some say red blood also comes from the spleen. Healthy bone marrow and healthy spleen are full of fat.

Scott's Emulsion makes new blood by feeding the bone marrow and the spleen with the richest of all fats, the pure cod liver oil.

For pale school girls and invalids and for all whose blood is thin and pale, Scott's Emulsion is a pleasant and rich blood food. It not only feeds the blood-making organs but gives them strength to do their proper work.

Minstrel Show at the Fair Saturday Night

Saturday night was a gala one at the Catholic Fair for on that evening Ranald McDonell and his all-star troupe gave a minstrel show assisted by Wm. Brackett and Lester Kerns of San Francisco. Mr. McDonell was interlocutor and Messrs. Brackett and Kerns end men. In the ring were also Walter Murphy, Jim Small, Ray Hunter, Claude Johnson, Frank Ahern, Guy Weems, Robt. Prussia, Miss Ruth Poppe, Mrs. Claude Burlingame, Mrs. Pauline McMullin and Mrs. S. A. Ringstrom.

The opening chorus, "Way Down in my Heart I've a Feeling for You," took the house.

Lester Kerns followed with a solo, "Nancy Brown," and then Mrs. Ringstrom sang, "I Love No One But You." This beautiful ballad called forth much applause. Walter Murphy was given a big ovation and sang "Let Me Die in the Deep." The vocal numbers were interspersed with jokes and local gags that would have done credit to a Hogan or Ezra Kendall.

One of the best numbers on the program was Miss Ruth Poppe's solo, "Killarney."

A quartette, composed of Mrs. Ringstrom, Mrs. McMullin, Mrs. Burlingame and Miss Ruth Poppe, gave some pleasing numbers.

The hit of the evening was Jim Small, who sang "No Coon Half so Warm." Jim is always a favorite and got a big send off.

Miss Clara Coyne of San Francisco danced an Irish hornpipe and was followed by Wm. Brackett, end man, who sang "Only One" and "Way Down South in Dixie." He also recited some humorous verses. "The Woodchucks" and "A Tender Spot for Father Dear."

Frank Ahean, direct from New York, made a decided hit with his clog dancing.

A grand medley by the entire company brought the show to a close.

MAN ACCIDENTALLY KILLED NEAR GLEN ELLEN.

John Wilkerson Has His Back Broken by Overturning of Wagon.

Wednesday night last about 11 o'clock as Ed. Goethe and a teamster named John Wilkinson were driving over the mountain road leading to the Goethe ranch, several miles northeast of Glen Ellen, the wagon, which was heavily loaded with lumber, ran off the mountain grade and Wilkerson, falling underneath the load of lumber, was killed almost instantly. Goethe was thrown clear of the wagon and escaped with slight bruises.

It appears that the men were hauling lumber for a new house to be erected on the Goethe place and on their way home they became confused in the darkness and ran up against on embankment, upsetting the wagon and throwing it over the grade. Wilkerson was thrown into a sitting posture and the lumber was piled upon him, breaking his back. He lived just long enough to tell Goethe that he was dying. The accident occurred about 200 yards from the Goethe ranch.

Wilkerson was 38 years of age. An inquest was held Thursday and a verdict rendered by a coroner's jury in accordance with the above facts.

ALPHONSE AND GASTON.

Schellville, Oct. 28, 1904.

Schelleville Shots.

John Lawler wears a broad smile these days. The rain makes the grass grow, the grass makes the cattle fat, and John raises the price for beef on foot and expands his smile accordingly.

Will there be a new railroad between Sonoma and Schellville? The question is as puzzling as the locating of the little pea under the shell. Surveys have been made, bold assertions that the road was assured have been indulged in, whispered confidences of how and when it will happen, and all sorts of rumors are rampant. It would be a great help to Sonoma to be connected with the busy, thriving town of Schellville, where the wind blows the mosquitoes over on the bay where they choke to death on fog.

M. P. Akers is shingling his domicile. It took considerable nerve for Mont to rip off the old shingles that had served him so many years. Each one seemed like an old friend that had stood between him and the wet for a long time and he well remembered when

"Every tinkle on the shingle
Had an echo in the heart,
And a thousand dreamy fancies
Into busy being start."

But when shingles are old and decripit they must, like human beings, be cast aside for the younger and more useful.

Jimmy Britt will please stand up and take notice. The Schellville Boxing Club is now in full blast. Dumb bells, Indian clubs, punching bags and boxing gloves are in constant use. The development of tissue is noticeable among the male population of Schellville. The broadening of shoulders, chest expansion, etc., are causing wonderment. Mr. Britt will no doubt be challenged just previous to his engagement with Mr. Gans. Any old Schellville boy can put him in the arms of Morpheus, and we would advise Sonoma people to be just a little careful regarding trying to cut out our Schellville lads at balls and parties for there is a good six-hour repose in each right hand swing or short left arm jab.

A DREAMLAND DETECTIVE.

Singular Way in Which an English Murderer Was Discovered.

In the London Mirror of Literature for June, 1844, there is an account of a dream that was remarkable in many respects. It is given upon the authority of a clergyman of the Church of England, the Rev. Mr. Alexander, who speaks from personal knowledge of some of the facts. It appears that a young man of good reputation, named Horrocks, was found robbed and murdered. His head had been beaten in apparently with bludgeons. A vigilant search was made for the assassin and after several months abandoned, no clew to the crime having been discovered. One night a gentleman who had been well acquainted with Horrocks awoke and told his wife that he had had a dream in which he had been assured that one Samuel Longsmith of Bolton was the murderer.

Longsmith lived some twenty miles away and was a person whom the dreamer had met but once or twice. His wife told him to think no more about it, but to go to sleep. A second time he awoke from the effects of the same dream and announced his resolution to take steps the following morning to see what could come of it. Accordingly he went to Bolton the next day and sought a warrant for the arrest of Longsmith. The magistrate, however, refused to grant it upon such evidence. Passing through the market place, he met Longsmith and invited him to go to a public house to hear something he had to communicate to him. There, locking the door, he charged him with the crime. Longsmith was staggered and faintly denied the accusation. In his confusion he said he was innocent, for he did not strike the blow.

"Then you know the man who did," replied the accuser, and Longsmith was arrested and examined. He prevaricated at the examination and was remanded for three days. At the end of that time and after many hours' prayer he confessed that he had been induced to join three men in a robbing expedition, when, meeting Horrocks, who made some resistance, his three companions murdered him. This confession came out before the grand jury, and Longsmith was brought to trial. The fact of the dream was not offered in evidence, but other testimony sufficient to convict him was produced. A few days before the execution he made a full acknowledgment of his guilt.

POETRY OF THE HEART.

A happy heart is better than a full purse.

He who hath most heart knows most of sorrow.

A cheerful countenance betokens a good heart.

No estate can make him rich that has a poor heart.

When you open your heart be always ready to shut it to again.

The heart's testimony is stronger than a thousand witnesses.

A glad heart seldom sighs, but a sorrowful mouth often laughs.

The heart is the hidden treasure of man; the tongue is the gate to the treasure.

There never was a heart truly great and generous that was not also tender and compassionate.—Chicago Post.

Pointing the Way.

Some years ago an English traveler visiting the Transvaal asked a man whom he met to direct him to the president's house. "You," came the answer, "shust ko on dill you comes to a road vot koes around der skoolhouse; but you don'd dake dot road. No, you ko on till you see der big barn, shingled mit shtraw, den you durn der road down der field und ko on dill you comes to a pig red hoose; dot ees my Broder Hans' hoose. Don't ko in dere; ko straight on dill you comes to der haystick mit a farm. Vell, he don't live dere. But vhen you get furder you see a hoose on der top of a leedle hill, so you ko in dere und asks der ould rowan inside. She vill tell you petter as I can."

The Roof Dogs of New York.

There are dogs in New York that never set foot on the street. They belong to the janitors in the downtown buildings, and their runways consist of the roof of the building in which their owners live and adjoining roofs on the same level. That is a rare day when the office worker on looking out the steenth story window does not see a half dozen dogs romping about upon the roofs beneath him. There is one advantage at least in being a roof dog—the dog catcher has no terrors for him.

Success.

With great care and much labor a caterpillar climbed up a tall spear of grass. When he reached the top he stood on his hind end and waved his front end in the air.

"Just as I feared," said he. "Success does not bring happiness."

But then he turned and climbed down, for the caterpillars are wiser than men.—Puck.

Wasted Cash!

"Improvident? Well, I should say! He spends his money in the most foolish way."

"Indeed?"

"Yes. Why, only the other day he spent half a dollar to advertise for an umbrella he had lost."—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Added Horror.

"That's a horrible idea De Riter has conceived."

"What's that?"

"He's talking of setting some of Browning's poems to Wagner's music."—Exchange.

AN OFFER DECLINED.

Attempt of the Tweed Ring to Bribe Nast, the Cartoonist.

A lawyer friend one day intimated to Nast that in appreciation of his great work a party of rich men wished to send him abroad and give him a chance to study art under the world's masters. The friend was probably innocent enough, an unconscious tool of the ring.

Nast said very little except that he appreciated the offer and would be delighted to go but for the fact that he had important business just then in New York. He fancied that he detected the far, faint odor of a mouse under the idea, but he did not mention this to his friend. On the following Sunday an officer of the Broadway bank where the ring kept its accounts came out to Morristown to see Nast. He talked of a number of things. Then he said:

"I hear you have been made an offer to go abroad for art study."

"Yes," nodded Nast, "but I can't go. I haven't time."

"But they will pay you for your time. I have reason to believe you could get $100,000 for the trip."

Nast pondered a moment, then:

"Don't you think I can get $200,000?"

"I do. I believe from what I have heard in the bank that you could get it. You have a great talent, but you need study and you need rest. Besides, this ring business will get you into trouble. They own all the judges and jurors and can get you locked up for libel. My advice is to take the money and get away."

Nast looked out into the street and perhaps wondered what $200,000 would do for him. It would pay the mortgage on the house in the city. It would give him years of study abroad. It would make him comfortable for life. Presently he said:

"Don't you think I could get $500,000 to make that trip?"

The bank official scarcely hesitated.

"You can. You can get $500,000 in gold to drop this ring business and get out of the country."

Nast laughed a little. He had played the game far enough.

"Well, I don't think I'll do it," he said. "I made up my mind a long time ago to put some of those fellows behind the bars, and I'm going to put them there!"

The banker rose rather quietly.

"Only be careful, Mr. Nast, that you do not first put yourself in a coffin!" he smiled.

It was not until two years later that he met Nast one day on Broadway.

"Nast," he said, "you did it after all!"—Albert Bigelow Paine in Pearson's.

A Surgical Dilemma.

"Did Jones have appendicitis?"

"The doctors disagreed. Some thought he had money and some thought he hadn't."—Puck.

My spark may grow greater by kindling my brother's taper.—Jeremy Taylor.

Emergency Medicines

It is a great convenience to have at hand reliable remedies for use in case of accident and for slight injuries and ailments. A good liniment and one that is fast becoming a favorite if not a household necessity is Chamberlain's Pain Balm. By applying it promptly to a cut, bruise or burn, it allays the pain and causes the injury to heal in about one-third the time usually required, and as it is an antiseptic it prevents any danger of blood-poisoning. When Pain Balm is kept at hand a sprain may be treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a quick recovery. For sale by R. G. Shoults, Sonoma, Cal.

Worth Keeping.

"He asked the firm for a raise in his salary."

"Did he get it?"

"Yes. They consider him the most valuable man they have. You see, when he petitioned for more money he did so on the ground that he had just discovered that the firm could get along without him."—Cleveland Leader.

Wooden Rheumatism.

"And you say the rheumatism's in your left leg, colonel?"

"It is, sir."

"Why; that's your wooden leg!"

"I know it, sir," replied the colonel. "That makes it all the harder."—Atlanta Constitution.

Good breeding is a letter of credit all over the world.

Abscess

W. H. Harrison, of Cleveland, Miss., writes, August 15, 1902: "I want to say a word of praise for Ballard's Snow Liniment. I stepped on a nail, which caused the cords in my leg to contract and an abscess to rise in my knee, and the doctor told me that I would have a stiff leg. So one day I went to J. F. Lord's store (who is now in Denver, Col.) He recommended a bottle of Snow Liniment; I got a 50-c size, and it cured my leg! It is the best liniment in the world."

Abscesses, with few exceptions, are indicative of constipation or debility. They may, however, result from blows or from foreign bodies introduced into the skin or flesh, such as splinters, thorns, etc. Sold by L. S. Simmons, prescription druggist, Sonoma, Cal.

In Praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy

"Allow me to give you a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Mr. John Hamlett of Eagle Pass, Texas. "I suffered one week with bowel trouble, and took all kinds of medicine without getting any relief, when my friend Mr. Johnson, a merchant here, advised me to take this remedy. After taking one dose I felt greatly relieved, and when I had taken the third dose was entirely cured. I thank you from the bottom of my heart for putting this great remedy in the hands of mankind." LOVE IN JAPAN.

It Is Very Different From That Which Warms the Western Heart.

The boys and girls, the young men and young women of Japan do love each other, I suppose, but one never sees the slightest shadow of evidence to prove it. The spirit of love does not dominate the national life as it does in America and the countries of Europe. Japan's poets do not sing of love; her story writers tell no tales of love that can thrill an Anglo-Saxon heart, and her artists paint no pictures of love that can reach the Anglo-Saxon understanding. Now, considering all this, how can there be such a thing as "a good old summer time" in this land of sunrise? And yet there is, and it is especially delightful in its way, too, because the Japanese are a nation of feasters and picnickers, of nature lovers and world beautifiers, and if one can only lose sight of the fact that everywhere one goes the poor little women toddle meekly along behind the men, who stalk pompously ahead as if they owned the earth, one may almost enjoy oneself.

One never sees a woman caressed in Japan, not even with a glance; one seldom sees a baby fondled—in fact, all human tenderness or expression of human tenderness is conspicuous by its absence, and I believe that is the one impassable great gulf that is fixed between us and this people. And yet the people are happy, with a simple, sweet happiness that is charming. That is it. It is an atmosphere that mildly charms, but never thrills, the western heart. All the nation's love is concentrated upon the emperor, and the highest note of the national life is sounded in yamato damashi, Japan spirit, patriotism, and even this is beyond our comprehension, because it is empty of romance and unsatisfactory to us, who cannot separate the interests of "fair women and brave men" even upon the battlefield.—Eleanor Franklin in Leslie's Weekly.

Neglected Colds

Every part of the mucuos membrane, the nose, throat, ears, head and lungs, is subjected to disease and blight from neglected colds. Ballard's Horehound Syrup is a pleasant and effective remedy. 25c, 50c, $1. W. Akendrick, Valley Mills, Tex., writes, "I have used Ballard's Horehound Syrup for coughs and throat troubles. It is a pleasant and most effective remedy." Sold by L. S. Simmons, prescription druggist, Sonoma, Cal.

Brains Not Needed.

Sir Conan Doyle once told a story of an English officer who was badly wounded in South Africa, and the military surgeon had to shave off that portion of his brain which protruded from his skull. The officer got well, and later on in London the surgeon asked whether he knew that a portion of his brain was in a glass bottle in a laboratory. "Oh, that does not matter now," replied the soldier; "I've got a permanent position in the war office."

He Knew the Game.

Deacon Heavyweight—And so you are going to leave us, parson? Rev. Mr. Thankful—Yes. I have had a call to another parish, where, by the way, the salary is considerably larger. I am sorry to leave my flock, but I must obey the call. Deacon Heavyweight (dryly)—Waal, it may be what you call a call, but it seems to me a good deal more like a raise.
